Alma Kellner Murdered; Body is Found in Cellar

Child's Remains Were Discovered by Plumber Early Monday

Belief That Child Was Murdered, Body Wrapped In Carpet and Thrown In Cellar

EVIDENCE OF FOUL PLAY

From The Evening Post, Monday

With the discovery of the body of Alma Kellner in the cellar of St. John's school the shadow has been lifted from part of the mystery that surrounded the disappearance of the child since December 8.

Father Schuhmann, the pastor of St. John's church, this afternoon told an Evening Post reporter that an odor which arose from the cellar where the body of Alma Kellner was found and which doubtless came from the corpse, caused him to set the plumbers to work and led to the discovery of the body.

The room just above the cellar had been used as a meeting place by church societies. Father Schuhmann said that when he noticed the odor he spoke of it to the present janitor, Mr. Wurth, who summoned the plumbers.

The police are now confronted with the solution of the remainder, the mystery as to how the child met her frightful fate and the running down of the guilty.

At noon the housekeeper at St. John's school was taken to the City Hall to be questioned by Chief of Detectives Carney. This was done for the purpose of developing all information the housekeeper might have of interest.

Father Schuhmann said to the Evening Post: "I am unable to find a theory. As for suspicions, I have none. I deplore the affair on account of the congregation."

At 1 o'clock Chief of Police Lindsey and Mayor W. O. Head arrived at the church and held a conference with Father Schuhmann.

Wrapped in a piece of rotting carpet, and covered with three or four inches of mud and rubbish, the body was found today in an unused cellar under the building of St. John's Parochial School, 706 East Walnut Street. The ghastly discovery was made by Richard B. Sweet, who works for the contracting firm of Haller & Zehnder, and who was engaged in pumping out the cellar when the body was unearthed.

Mr. Sweet had pumped out the cellar and was engaged in scooping up the mud on the floor when his spade struck a bundle wrapped in a piece of carpet, shortly after 9:30 o'clock today. On examination he found that the bundle contained a badly decomposed body of a child, and upon unwrapping it in the dim light, he disclosed the legs, from which the flesh had fallen, but to which the shoes still clung.

Mr. Sweet hastily mounted to the first floor of the school and notified the Rev. George Schuhmann, pastor of St. John's church, who in turn notified Chief of Police Lindsey. Chief Lindsey notified Frank Fehr, a cousin of Alma Kellner, and in company with his brother-in-law, George Kramer, Mr. Fehr proceeded at once to the scene.

From Tuesday's Courier-Journal

Following the finding of Alma Kellner's brutally-hacked body, wrapped in an old carpet, in a cellar under St. John's parochial school on Clay and Walnut streets yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, Mrs. Joseph Wendling, wife of the former janitor at the institution, was arrested last night on the charge of accessory to murder.

The arrest followed alleged conflicting statements on the part of the woman.

According to John P. Carney, chief of detectives, the woman admitted in his office, just before her arrest, that the stains on the clothing of her husband are blood spots. These, however, she stoutly denies, were caused by blood that flowed from a wound in her husband's hand which he inflicted by accident more than a year ago. The afternoon the woman is said to have declared that the spots on the clothing were from clay. When pressed by Capt. Carney as to why she had delayed a year before washing spots out of the clothing, the woman said she did not know. The woman's husband disappeared from Louisville January 14, and the police are looking for him.

MISS JEWELS GOING TO AVIATION MEET

Will Get To See "Bud" Mars Take A Drive In His Aeroplane.
Many "Flying Devils" Will Be In Louisville.

TIMES AVIATION MEET SOON.

"I have been a piece of statutory all my life," said Miss Elsie Jewels to a representative of the News Saturday, "but I am going to Louisville sure to see them flying devils I have been reading about in them Louisville Times." That will be great for you and you can get reduced rates; you can go on the Henderson Route on excursion prices, replied the newspaper reporter. "Yes, the ride will be worth the money," reasoned Miss Jewels. "That cotton headed man down there at Noite Bros. wanted me to get a new dress but I ain't. Style ain't the ruination of the world and I am just a going on with the riggings I got; going to be such a jam of people there, says them Times, that it won't be no use to dress up. Everybody will be looking upwards," said Elsie Jewels as she talked on.

Miss Jewels does not come to Cloverport very often but she is always welcome to the News office. She seems to be pleased with the thought of her getting to see Bacon's store of which she had read about in the Breckenridge News. Her friends hope that her initial visit to the big city will be one of perfect pleasure to her.

Quite a large crowd of the society people of Cloverport are planning to go to the Times Aviation Meet which will be held at Churchill Downs, June 18, 19. The new port is becoming quite popular all over the world and Louisville is indeed up-to-date in having one within her gates.

"THE GREATEST NEED OF OUR TIMES"

From address delivered by Father Brey at the Commencement of the Cloverport High School

"The question may be asked: What is the greatest need of our times for the betterment of Christian society? Is it churches? Temples of worship are indeed very necessary. The construction of well-adorned houses of worship is an evidence of the faith and devotion of the people. But they are not the most essential thing for our day. The primitive Christians paid homage to God in the catacombs, and some of our forefathers adored the Lord under the canopy of heaven, in secluded mountains, and in caves of the earth; and they were the best of Christians. Moreover, what would be the use of churches if we had no worshippers to frequent them? What the times call for is men and women, sturdy, Christian men and women, endowed with the courage of their convictions. We need men who are controlled by conscience rather than by expediency, men who are guided by principle rather than by popularity, men who are influenced by a sense of duty and not by self-interest, who are swayed by a spirit of patriotism rather than by a desire of political preferment. In a word, we need men and women of upright Christian character.

Dr. BACON DEAD

Survived By His Wife, Mrs. Jessie
Shell Bacon And Two Children--
Funeral At Arcola
Illinois

Dr. Geo. H. Bacon, formerly a physician of Chesterville, died at the home of his mother in Anna, Illinois last Saturday and the funeral was held there Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The announcement was received with surprise and regret by his Arcola friends as he was a man of splendid physique and when he left here a few years ago was in excellent health. His death is said to have been due to an affection of the kidneys. He was forty-five years of age and was a man of broad education and travel. He spent several years in a medical school in Europe.

While practicing at Chesterville he married Miss Jessie Shull, of this city a sister of Mrs. R. E. Galloway and Mrs. Frank Howell. Two children were born who with the mother survive him. When they left Arcola they located at San Antonio, New Mexico, where they lived until a few weeks ago.

The above, which is taken from the Arcola Record-Herald, published at Arcola, Ill., will be of interest to many of our readers because Mrs. Bacon was formerly Miss Jessie Shull, who with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Shull, lived in Hartford a number of years and Miss Jessie still has many friends here who will regret to learn of her sorrow. She is a niece of Judge W. B. Taylor and Mrs. J. C. Jones, of Hartford.--Hartford Herald.

NEW CAPITOL IS DEDICATED

ELABORATE PROGRAM AT THE FORMAL OPENING OF NEW BUILDING.

THREE ADDRESSES DELIVERED

Kentucky's State House One of the Handsomest in the United States—Interesting Historical Facts.

(By G. R. Keller, Carlisle, Ky.)

Frankfort, Ky.—The magnificent new capitol building is dedicated. In the presence of a large gathering of citizens, prominent men and politicians who had come to Frankfort to do honor to the occasion, the dedication ceremonies took place Thursday.

The exercises began at an early hour in the morning by the firing of a signal gun at the arsenal and were not concluded until a late hour at night. Three addresses, two of them short, were delivered at the formal exercises held in the new building. During the morning, the crowds arrived on every train and those from nearby points in automobiles or other conveyances. The reception committees were kept busy welcoming the arrivals.

The exercises in the Capitol began shortly after noon. The address of welcome was made by Mayor James H. Polsgrove on behalf of the city. He was followed by Augustus E. Willson, former Gov. J. C. W. Beckham, under whose administration the erection of the building was started, also made a short address.

The principal address of the day was made by Senator W. O. Bradley, who was introduced to the assemblage by Gov. Willson. The singing by the girls of the Louisville high school and the patriotic music by the band were among the features of the exercises. During the afternoon the building and offices were open for inspection by the visitors. From 7:30 p. m. until 11 p. m. the state reception was held in the Capitol building and was a real old-fashioned Kentucky housewarming. The wives of the state officials as guests in receiving.

The members of the 1910 general assembly were all present and the majority of the members of the general assembly of 1905 and 1909 who appropriated the money for the erection of the building were also present to rejoice with the citizens that so great a work has been accomplished and that no taint of corruption attaches. A touching feature of the exercises was the decorating of the grave of the Rev. J. McFisher Mayhew in Frankfort cemetery during the morning by a committee of the Frankfort United Men's club, as provided by resolution of that body in recognition of his loyalty to and his exertions in the retention of the seal of government at Frankfort.

The grounds surrounding the capitol were not entirely completed. The visitors got a fairly good idea of the beauty of the approach to the building when completed.

Some Historic Facts.
On December 6, 1776, Kentucky County was established by Virginia out of Pinecastle County. In the spring of 1782 Kentucky was erected into a district and a "Court of Criminals as well as Civil Jurisdiction, coextensive with the district was erected," says Collins, the historian. The first court was held at Harrodsburg the same year.

First Convention in Danville.
The first convention looking to the admission of the district into the Union as a State was held at Danville, December, 1784, and was composed of delegates from each militia company in the district. No definite results were secured, as the Virginia Legislature prescribed such restrictions as were not acceptable to the leaders of the district.

Much political excitement followed, and it was only after seven conventions were held that the eighth convention secured such concessions from the mother state as were acceptable, and called the ninth convention to meet in Danville in April, 1791, to form a State Constitution. Congress having on February 4, 1791, passed an act admitting Kentucky into the Union.

First Permanent State House, Frankfort, Ky., built 1793 and destroyed by fire 1813.

PUBLIC RECEPTION ROOM FOR GOVERNOR IN THE NEW STATE CAPITOL BUILDING. SAID TO BE AS HANDSOME AS ANY IN THE UNITED STATES.

The First Constitution.
The members of the ninth and final convention were elected in December, 1791, met the following April, and formed the first constitution. This constitution was adopted by the people in May, 1792, and Isaac Shelby was elected governor. The legislature elected at the same time met at Lexington in June of the same year and fixed upon Frankfort as the future permanent seat of government. The first meeting of the legislature at Lexington was held in a two-story log house, of which no picture or description is preserved.

The second temporary state house in which the legislature met at Frankfort in 1793, was for its day a rather pretentious two-story frame residence, the home of Andrew Holmes, who donated the land upon which to erect a permanent building, and who also gave much timber, stone, etc., for the erection of the first permanent state house. (A fairly good picture of which is given herewith.) This building was destroyed by fire in November, 1812, and the second one, which was erected 1814-16 (see illustration), was burned in 1824.

Volumes Could Be Written.
During the years 1827-29 the classical state house recently vacated (and which is shown in illustration) was erected. It was the seventh building used as a state house. Volumes could be written of this grand old building and the happenings within its walls, for the greater part of Kentucky's political history has been made during the three-quarters of a century it had been occupied. Within its walls all of Kentucky's famous men of that time have been heard, and her greatest jurists have handed down landmark decisions, many of which have been accepted by the Nation and Sister Commonwealths as the correct interpretation of the law.

Cost Over Two Millions.

The new capitol building, grounds, electric light plant, landscape gardening and other improvements will cost when completed two and a half million dollars, and there has never been the least suspicion of graft connected with the work.

The building of a new state house commensurate with the wealth and dignity of the Commonwealth had long been considered and discussed at many sessions of the General Assembly, but it was not until 1884, under the administration of Gov. Beckham, that an appropriation of one million dollars was made to begin the work.

The commission, consisting of Gov. C. W. Beckham, Auditor S. H. Hager, Secretary of State H. V. Chesney, State Treasurer Henry Bosworth and Atty. Gen. Hayes, together with Architect F. M. Andrews, decided that the grounds occupied by the old state house were not large enough, or that its location in the center of the city was not a suitable place for the new building.

Decide to Purchase New Site.

Accordingly, in 1905, Gov. Beckham convened the legislature in extraordinary session to consider the matter of a new location. After some weeks' consideration it was decided to purchase a new site at the extreme south limit of South Frankfort, about a mile from the old, and an appropriation was made to buy the forty or more acres selected.

Ground was broken for the new building in 1906, and the magnificent building was completed and occupied in less than four years. It is one of the most complete and convenient Capitol buildings in the country, many persons who are familiar with public buildings throughout the United States pronounce it without a superior for the purpose for which it was erected. The illustrations given herewith furnish but a faint idea of its grandeur, especially the interior views. The view from the front of the hall of the House of Representatives looking toward the Senate Chamber gives but a poor expression of the marble and granite pillars and balustrades, arches and grand winding stairways, which command admiration of all who enter the magnificent vestibule for the first time. The tower where sits Kentucky's highest court is a marvel of beauty, but the architect and designer seemed to concentrate the power of his genius when he came to plan and decide upon the disposition of the reception room assigned to the governor for public occasions. Our illustration gives some idea of the beauty of this room, but it is only to be fully appreciated when seen.

Commendable and Convenient.

The various offices for the department are commodious and convenient. Nothing that would conduce to the dispatch of business or the comfort of the officials seems to have been overlooked or neglected. After many years of wishing and waiting those who have felt a pride in Kentucky's wealth and greatness are rejoiced that she is no longer ashamed to invite a stranger to visit her Capitol.

It is but proper to state that the completion of the building was under the administration of Gov. Augustus E. Willson, assisted by State Auditor Frank P. James, Secretary of State Hon. J. C. W. Beckham, Treasurer Edward Farley and Atty. Gen. James Breathitt, and that they have been credited with having maintained the standard of ability and honesty established by Gov. Beckham and his fellow commissioners.

Dedication Committees.

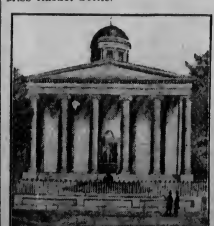

The reception committees were as follows:

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root not only cures every ailment connected with the urinary system, but corrects its liability to hold water and scaling pain in passing it, and to cause following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all sufferers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., P.O. Box 518, Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent bottles are sold everywhere at all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The Breakfast Tray.

A few years ago it was thought a positive luxury if one was well and strong to have breakfast served in bed. Nowadays things have changed. The housewife who can afford to stay in bed every now and then will find it immensely improved in strength. And the occasional guest often has her coffee and rolls sent up to her room. Many hostesses would rather have the early morning hours

CHAMBERLAIN'S REMEDY IN ENAMELED WARE.

In which to attend to their household duties or to their correspondence unhindered by the presence of a stranger within the gates. So the individual breakfast service has to be provided, and it is a sad in some households to see which member of the family can have the daintiest tray. The enameled breakfast tray seen in the illustration is comparatively inexpensive and is one of the newest things of the kind to be found in the shops.

A Woman's Great Idea

is how to make herself attractive. But, without health, it is hard for her to be lovely in face form or temper. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want to look healthy and beautiful. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion, good health. Try them. 50c at Severs Drug Store.

"KISS NOT" CAMPAIGN.

Cincinnati Woman's Warning of the Danger in Kissing.
Mrs. J. Reclut, wife of a well known business man of Cincinnati, has set out to do away with the bacteria spreading kiss through the World's Health organization, of which she is president. "Kiss not" is the motto of the W. H. O. It is emphasized in red letters on a white button worn by the members. Hundreds of circulars are being sent through the mails one part of which reads:

"Why not stop kissing? It is a time honored custom, and one person cannot stop it. It is only in unity that sufficient strength can be gained to convince the world that kissing is pernicious and unwholesome."

Attached to the circular is a pledge, which covers are urged to be forwarded to the president. It is suggested that women wear "kiss not" buttons to teas and receptions, where indiscreet kissing is much in order; also that it be attached to the clothing of babies.

ALL HAIL TO BOY SCOUTS

Growth of a Great Movement Which Began in England and Has Gained a Foothold in the United States.

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

BOY SCOUT AT WORK.

Novel Idea Which Tends to Develop Boyish Lads Into Manly Men—Bodies of Scouts to Be Organized in Every State.

We know now that war is what General Sherman said it is, and we have to desire to shut up the ledgers, lock up the grocery store, close down the pickle factory and don the inhibitions of martial combat just for the glory of the thing.

But when we were boys each of us hoped some day to excel Napoleon, Washington or Grant or Lee or Stonewall Jackson as a leader of fighting men in the imminent deadly breach.

This progressive world of ours has worked along to healthier, safer and safer ideals. Boys will be boys as always, but today some of those who used to be boys have derived a method of venting military enthusiasm which tends toward the development of boyish boys into manly men.

And the boy scout movement is the method.

Primarily out of the needs of boyhood, but incidentally out of the floor war in South Africa, the boy scout movement has evolved. General Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell, one of the conquering heroes of that struggle against the heroic enemies of the veldt, is the originator of the movement, which began in England and has just begun to spread in the United States. General Baden-Powell after his gall fighting took a look in at the English boys and conceived the notion that he could organize them into a great army of peace, with military appeals to the average boy irrespective of high moral ideas. He wears a uniform, for one thing. The normal boy craves a uniform, even a baseball suit. The scout wears the real khaki, with golf stockings, belt and felt hat. He carries a gun, too, when he drills, though it is not loaded. He learns military tactics in the cadence.

But above all, he marches with his fellows to the faring words and learns woodcraft, how to light his campfire, which his tent, how to make a trail, the points of the compass, and the signs in fact, do everything a trained soldier may be called upon to do except the trench and shoot other soldiers, and after being a boy scout for a few years he will know how to do that if it becomes necessary.

Indorsed by Thompson Seton.

Ernest Thompson Seton, the noted Canadian-American naturalist, is an enthusiastic in the boy scout movement. For some years Mr. Seton has been organizing bands of boys for the study of woodcraft and Indian lore. The British scout movement has now taken the form of the "lawless, the fisherman's bend, the dove hitch, the reef knot and the sheet bow." He must be able to follow his own mind, for as a scout he must be a man in less than fifteen minutes and to tell his commanding officer the kind of animal he is following. These things required by Mr. Seton, and they will become a part of the American boy scout curriculum in the great university of the open air.

General Frederick Russell Seward, one of the civil war generals, also has given his hearty approval to the boy scout movement in the United States. General Seward took it from the military side as a preparation for possible future service, but he does not overlook the ethical side of the matter. In common with many other eminent Americans he realizes what a grand thing it is for growing lads to be inured to discipline, dignity and knighthood, as well as to learn the habits and habits of wild animals, to become acquainted with the trees and the flowers and to bask in the abundant life of the big outdoors.

Not only, fellow of forty or fifty, just fancy having had in your early years the chance to don a rent uniform, fall in line with all the other boys you knew and a lot of them that you had not known before, but wanted to know, march in military order out along the old red road between the rail fences or the bordering woods and meadows, make camp, sleep in tents, eat in "mess," learn to wigwag, engage in a sham battle now and then, stand sentry, do scouting duty away from camp and practice all sorts of outdoor exercises under the instruction of a grownup man who knows how! If you had had such opportunities, maybe you wouldn't have perpetrated such a laughing to learn to play pool, smoke cigarettes and otherwise become what you considered smart in those days.

Organized in Several Cities.

These boy scouts are not going to be selected from the idle rich classes merely. Any boy who is willing to undergo the discipline for the sake of fun and the general all round benefit is eligible to enlistment. Scout organizations have been formed already in several of the great cities—New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles. The promoters of the movement in America are looking for efficient, earnest men in all cities and towns to take charge of scout camps and instruct the boys. It is the intention to organize the scouts in every state. One object of the movement is to keep the boys off the streets, where they are inclined to loiter, and to do things not necessary to their future welfare or the welfare of society.

The boy scout idea appeals with special force to the city boys, who are cooped up in apartments and flats, and to all towns where the conditions of life are such as tend toward the stunting of physical growth by too much crowding or too little outdoor life. Physically healthy men, morally healthy men—these are the cardinal aims of the boy scout movement. We'll have girl scouts next. Well, why not? England has them already.

ROAD BUILDING AS AN ART.

Establishment of Chairs on Subject in Colleges Urged by an Expert.

Samuel Hild, a son-in-law of James J. Hill, the northwest railway magnate and the president of the American Road Builders' association, takes a practical view of the roadmaking art. He asserts it needs trained men and advocates the establishment of road building chairs in all the important colleges of the United States and especially at West Point.

He has succeeded in impressing this view upon some of the institutions of learning of the state of Washington, of which he is a resident, and 200 young men in that state are studying the road building course this year.

Mr. Hild declares that in five years in consequence of the interest taken by the local colleges in this matter and the progressive attitude of the legislature, which devotes one-third of the revenues of the state to road building, Washington will have the best system of roads in the United States.

Whether Washington, one of the youngest states of the Union, will be able in that time to outstrip all her sister states in providing a modern highway system may be open to question, but there is sound sense in the recommendation that a system of education in practical road building should be established as a prerequisite to the construction of a general system of permanent highways in the United States.

Much of the money heretofore devoted to the construction of roadways that are blown in dry weather and are unproductive in wet has previously been wasted, partly through the ignorance of the roadmakers as to what constituted a good road.

The first step toward putting an end to this waste and entering upon self-sufficient methods will be the training of a lot of students in the art of making roads.

Odd Signs.

A thimble in the south of England has a sign which reads, "Quart Measures of All Shapes and Sizes Sold Here."

At a market town in the midlands the following placard was affixed to the shutters of a watchmaker who had deceased, leaving his confiding creditors, creditors, "Round 'P and the Manspinner, Broke."

In one of the principal streets of another small town the same shop was occupied by a doctor and a shoemaker, the sign of medicine being the front and the leather working in the rear. Over the door hung the sign, "We Repair Both Bodies and Shoes."

On the window of a coffee room there are four appeared the notice, "This Coffee Room Removed upstairs Till Repaired."

Playful Monkeys.

Apes and gillies are usually vicious and resentful and less addicted to playful tricks than the common monkey. It is a trickster both in his wild and domestic state. In their native forests monkeys spend hours in swinging from the boughs of trees, suspended by their tails, and chattering and grinning with evident signs of delight. Hundreds of monkeys were once employed in a South American forest.

COAL TAR IN ROADMAKING.

Similar to Asphalt Pavement, but of a

More Resilient Character.

Revolution in highway construction is predicted by many road engineers, but many others believe the successful macadam method modified will be the only innovation. In that event the macadam method will surely be considered. A properly tarred road is similar to an asphalt pavement, but of a more resilient character. The stone is all bound together by the tar into a smooth, firm surface, which can be swept and washed in much the same manner as an asphalt pavement.

The main agencies which cause deterioration of tarred or oiled surfaces are heavy rain, frost and the decaying organic matter which accumulates on the surface of the road. So far as can be determined, one kind of road withstands the action of these agencies as well as the other. Water gas tar is used in connection with coal tar, but not to any great extent by itself. It has a greater power of penetration, and less of it is required, but it is not so lasting. It really is a class by itself and occupies an intermediate position between the temporary and the permanent roadway.

In some cases where a limited amount of money is available or where

Using Roller on Coal-Tar Road.

From Good Roads Magazine, New York for climatic reasons it is available to treat the road with the idea of its lasting only through one season water gas tar is expected to prove a valuable dust layer, and any extension of its use is thought to lie in this direction. The value of coal tar in the preservation of macadam roads and as a dust preventive is proved by the fact that in the majority of cases the life of a treated road has been materially lengthened, and by applying tar the complete retarding of many roads at an enormous expense has been avoided.

A great drawback in the standardization of tar treatment is the impossibility of securing a uniform supply of coal tar. It is purely a by-product, and the processes by which it is derived are never run with reference to the quality of tar produced, but simply to obtain maximum yields of gas or coke.

Good Road Maxims.

A good road affords an excellent way to church.

A dollar spent on the road is as good as two spent on the farm. A country is known by the roads it keeps.

Better go two miles on a good road than half a mile on a bad one. The wide tire maketh the glad path madder.

A bad road and its travel are soon barred.

Many path masters spill the roads.

A little gravel is a dangerous thing. Sow deep or yellow fall and spring.

The horse knoweth the bad road and stretch his ears down.

Many country roads are paved with good intentions, but for the most part with humps of sod, stones, roots and muddish.

ERNEST THOMPSON SETON, GENERAL FREDERICK D. BADEN-POWELL (ON THE RIGHT) WITH A BOY SCOUT.

begin to gain a foothold on United States soil and to march through Georgia and the rest of the states.

Butter, you and I, who are carolling around the edges of forty and still feeling the friskiness of boyhood and demoting the visible surface, must confess that we envy the boys of 1910. They didn't have the boy scouts in our days in the delectable kingdom of Boyville. We had to shift for our selves, finding our way independently. We played "ball ring" and "three-cornered cat" when we wanted the real signifiy of things outdoors, and we had to do our own organizing for the sport. Frequently there was a woful lack of organization, and when the old rubber ball, wrapped lightly with a thin layer of yarn, plunked us in the plexus, we sometimes resented it with tut-tutts, which method was inelegant and unmanly, no matter what may be said as to the desirability of the many art of self defense.

The trouble was we lacked discipline. The boy scout propaganda teaches discipline. It teaches the universal brotherhood of boys. It teaches boys to be just and generous to each other and work toward the extenuation of the "gang" idea. So that the south sides will not lie in wait for the west ends with an arsenal of brickbats.

Did You Never Train?

Millions of American men now in life's prime recall that old piece of verse in McGuffey's Third Reader which began something like this:

Oh, were you never a soldier, And did you never train, And feel the swelling of the heart You never can feel again?

When you and I were boys, particularly if we lived in the border states or on the edges of the Mexican border, we used to divide according to the "Red" or "Fed" sentiment and do shun battling that sometimes developed into something like a shambles, which the dictionary tells us is a place for slaughtering. We did such things simply because every boy who has red drops in his arteries must have some sense of kicking off his military enthusiasm.

discipline not too severe for comfort, so that they might spend a considerable part of their time in the great outdoors and learn some of the field tactics which come in handy when there is a real war.

Not Primarily Military.

It cannot be denied that the original idea of the general was to teach the young British idea how to sprout in British fashion, ready later on to be a virtue force for the upholding of the empire. But the Baden-Powell beginning has developed a little more practical thing—the inculcation of personal honor, fraternal feeling and manly habits of acting and thinking.

So the boy scout movement comes to the United States, after more than 200,000 English boys have been organized and drilled, as a peace proposition rather than a war measure. Edwin D. Horsfield of Edinburgh planned the need of the boy scout propaganda in this country at Springfield, Mass. He organized the boys of the Young Men's Christian association into a company based upon the Baden-Powell plan, with offshoots suggested by experience. These are the fundamental principles:

A scout's honor is to be trusted. A scout is loyal to his country and his employers. A scout's duty is to be useful and to help others. A scout is a friend to all and a brother to every other scout, no matter to what social class the other belongs. A scout is courteous. He is a friend to all animals and birds, and he respects the rights and whistles under all circumstances. He is thrifty. This is the pledge he takes:

"I will do my duty to God and my country. I will do my best to help others, whatever it costs me. I know the scout law and will obey it. Some professional moralists would manufacture a better code of ethics for American boys, but he doesn't happen to have one so.

And you mustn't imagine that this set of principles turns any of the boys against the movement. It does not. There is much in the scout plan that Miss Beard Honored.

We clip from a Buena Vista, Va. paper the following merited words about Miss Hannah Beard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Beard:

The entertainment at the Auditorium Wednesday evening was the occasion of the Graduating Recital of Misses Hannah Beard and Mary Orland, both graduates in elocution. On account of the popularity of Miss Beard, and the excellent work on the part of both, the house was crowded with an audience that showed their appreciation of the work of these young ladies by expressions of approval and liberal applause. Each recited from three classes of work, poetry, a heavy selection and a humorous one. Miss Beard's numbers were "Ships at Sea", "Annoyed Lee", "A Cuddled Violet", and "The Chariot Race" from "Ben Hur". The selections are too well known for us to give a description of them. Miss Beard was exceedingly good in all of them but was at her best in the "Chariot Race". Her work in this was perfect and in the manner of a born actress, and should she decide to join the people playing it before the American public today, we feel sure that the position of leading lady would be open to her at once. Her work during her stay at the Seminary has been so pleasing to the public that it is regretted that she will not return. The young ladies received many handsome presents during the evening, including flowers, candy and books.

A HUMILIATED MONKEY.

The Crippled Old Despot Was Made to Feel His Mighty Fall.

The following amusing story is told by L. L. Kipling in his "Man and Beast in India" of the humiliation of a monkey whom physical disablement prevented from maintaining his despotic position as leading male of the troop: "One morning there came a monkey chieftain, weak and limping, having evidently been worsted in a severe fight with another of his own kind. One hand hung powerless, his face and eyes bore terrible traces of battle, and he limped slowly along with a pathetic air of suffering, supporting himself on the shoulder of a female—a wife, the only member of his clan that had remained faithful to him after his defeat.

"We threw them bread and raisins, and the wounded warrior carefully stowed the greater part away in his cheek pouch. The faithful wife, seeing her opportunity, holding fast his one sound hand and opening his mouth, deftly scooped out the store of raisins. Then she sat and ate them very calmly at a safe distance, while he mowed and chattered in impotent rage.

"He knew that without her help he could not reach home and was fain to wait with what patience he might till the raisins were finished. This was probably her first chance of disobedience or self assertion in her married life, and I am afraid she thoroughly enjoyed it."

CHAPTER XV.

THE ARIA FROM "IL TROVATORE."
"HALL, we take a look into the Campo Formosa again to-night," asked Meriweth, stepping into the gondola.
"It will be a waste of time. Bettina will have warned them. What's the Italian coming to, anyhow? She refused a hundred francs. But I can see that Mrs. Sandford had a hand in this latest event. She has probably written that we might look for them in the Campo."

"All right. We'll listen to the music," grumbled Meriweth. He wanted to find Kitty right away. Hillard's indifference annoyed him.

"To the barges of the trouper," said Hillard to Achille.

In the great canal of San Marco the scene was like a water carnival. Hundreds of gondolas, with bobbing lights, swam slowly round the larger of the gondoliers, who, for the most part, were fallen opera stars or those who had failed to attain those dizzy heights.

What was that? Hillard was no longer lethargic.

From a gondola on the far side of the large, standing out of the press and just beyond the radiance of the lanterns, came a voice which had a soul in it, a voice which broke into song for the pure joy of it—clear, thrilling—a voice before which the world bows down. The prima donna in the large was clever, she stopped. The tenor went on, however, recognizing that he was singing opposite, as they say, to a great singer. Hillard's heart beat fast. That voice! There could not be another like it. And she was here in Venice!

"Quick, Achille," for the far gondola was heading for the Grand canal.

Meriweth understood now.
"Follow," commanded Hillard. "You live if you can come up alongside that gondola. Can you see the number?"

"It is 152, Signor—Pompeo. It will be a race."

At each stroke Meriweth swung forward his body. The end of the race came sooner than any expected. A police barge moved round an ell. By the time Pompeo was off again the ferrule of the pursuing gondola scraped Pompeo's side. Pompeo called, and Achille answered. There was a war of words, figure of a dog, name of a pig. Achille was in the wrong but 10 lire were 10 lire.

Hillard caught the gondola by the rail and clung. The race was over.
"Signorina," said Pompeo, boiling with rage, "ah! I call the police!"
"No, Pompeo," said his polite passenger.

"To the Campo, Pompeo. Mr. Hillard, you will kindly follow. I would speak to you alone, since there is no escape."

The way to the Campo Formosa was made without further incident. The gondoliers became meeker. Hillard jumped out and went to assist La Signorina, but she ignored his outstretched hand.

"What is it you wish?" she asked.

"One look at your face," he answered simply.

She slowly removed the veil. Then, for the first time, he looked upon the face of this woman who had burdened his dreams. The face was not like any he had conjured. It seemed to him that Vecchio's—Padra Vecchio's—Barbara had stepped down from her frame—beauty, tranquil, flawless beauty. A minute passed. He was incapable of speech; he could only look.

"Well?" she said in the same expressionless tone.

"Let us begin at the beginning," he replied.

"Since this is to be the end?"

"Why did you permit me to dine with you that memorable night?"

"A regrettable impulse."

"And why, after all had come to an apparent end—why did you send me that mask?"

"It is unanswerable. Truthfully I do not know."

"Who is that man—the Italian with the scar?"

"I will not answer that."

"A lady? Grace of Mary, that is droll!"

"Why do you say that?"

"I am only quoting the man with the scar. Those were the words he used in regard to you."

"Perhaps he is right. Perhaps I am a lady according to his lights!" But she laughed.

"Do not laugh like that. What you are or have been or might have been to him is nothing to me. Only one fact remains clear, and that is I love you."

"O, Mr. Hillard, you are only exposed. I may be a fugitive from the law."

"I do not believe it."

"There may be scars which do not show," she faltered—"in the heart, in the mind. I am sorry, terribly sorry. You know that I meant no harm. Forget me."

"Forget you? Tell me what prevents friendship between us?"

"You say you love me. Is that not misgiving enough? Give up all idea, all thought, of me. You will only waste your time. Come, let us force strong enough to offer a single sacrifice?"

"Not if it is to give you up. Oh, do not worry about persecution! I shall only seek to be near you."

"Good night," she said, "and good-bye." She turned the veil round her head, took half a dozen steps, halted and turned, then went on into the dark.

"The Aria Ariadne rested upon a small boat half a mile or more north of the old Fiesole, from which the gondoliers of the Venetian lagoon were to be seen at all times, gliding in the rain, sparkling in the light."

"I do not run smoothly enough at the Villa Ariadne. La Signorina at the very last moment surrendered to the entreaties of Kitty. She agreed not to pass herself off as the princess. Among themselves each played the role originally assigned. La Signorina seemed to enjoy the farce as much as any one. It was a great temptation not to steal a look into the marvelous chests and wardrobe, bulging as they knew with precious gowns and silver and linen and lace. But La Signorina each day inspected the chests and uttered solemn warnings.

"They had now lived in the Villa Ariadne for two weeks, a careless, thoughtless, happy-go-lucky family. Today was warm and mellow. On the door-bench by the portico's border, a little French maid, the old Florentine and O'Mally. From some unknown source O'Mally had produced a congerie's hat and coat, a little moth-eaten, a little tarnished, but serviceable.

"Pietro," said O'Mally, "I've got an idea. If any tourists come around I propose to show them today the place."

Pietro's eyes flashed angrily. "No, no. Mine, all mine!"

"I am not going to rob you! I'll give you the tip. What I want is the fun of the thing."

Pietro understood. That was different. If his excellency would pay over to him the receipts he could conduct the tourists as often as he pleased. They shared a glass of wine. The porter's bell rang loudly.

"Tourists!" whispered O'Mally. He settled his cap on straight and went to the gates. A party of five Americans stood outside—two men, two women and a girl.

"This is the Villa Ariadne?" asked one of the women.

"It is," said O'Mally, touching his cap.

"He speaks English!" cried the woman, turning joyfully to the others.

"We wish to see the villa and the park."

"The villa is now occupied, although," replied O'Mally, "but you are permitted to see the park and garden."

Nurse Says:

"I know what is good for young and old people," writes Mrs. Clara Dykstra, a trained nurse of South Beilleville, Wash., "and will say that I consider Cardui the best medicine for girls and women. It makes them feel like new persons, relieves their pain and regulates womanly troubles. Both my daughter and I received great benefit."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

As a medicine for female trouble, no medicine you can get has the old established reputation, that Cardui has. Fifty (50) years of success prove that it has stood the test of time. As a tonic for weak women, Cardui is the best, because it is a woman's tonic. Pure, gentle, safe, reliable. Try Cardui.

"How much?" asked one of the men. "Inquaint," said O'Mally, then correcting himself, "for each person."

"Ten cents? Two lire fifty? Why, this is downright extortion!" declared the woman.

"I really gave you a perfect Italian shirt and put a hand out and gave you the money."

"Oh, come, dear," protested one of the men, "you've dragged us up here from Fiesole, and I'm not going back without seeing what's to be seen."

Solemnly Pietro watched them pass, wondering what the terms were. O'Mally led the party to the fountain.

"This," O'Mally began, with a careless wave of the hand, "is the famous fountain by Donatello. It was originally owned by Catherine d'Medici. The Borgias stole it from her, and Italy and France nearly came to war over it."

"The Borgias?" doubtfully. "Were these two families contemporaneous?"

"They were," he replied.

The quietest consulted their guide-books, but before they had located the fountain referring to this work O'Mally was chuckling loudly and away. He passed on to the antique parlors, explaining how this one was new, that one "Caligula's," that one "Cleopatra's." He led so glibly that the tomb of Annulus must have rocked.

"Do you know," said the woman, who had not yet spoken, "you speak English with an accent I do not understand."

O'Mally shivered. Was she going to spring daggers on him? "I am an Italian," he said solemnly. "I was born, however, in County Clare. My father and mother were immigrants to Ireland."

"Ma," whispered the girl, "ask him for one of those buttons."

The single whisper was overheard by O'Mally. "These buttons," he explained, "cost a lire each, but if the signorina really wishes one—And thus another lira swelled the profits of the day."

At the gates O'Mally received his purchase (tip) of 20 centesimi and returned to Pietro.

"Quando?" he cried.

O'Mally handed him the exact amount, minus the lira for the button.

"Santa Maria! All these? How? No more I take dear! You!"

O'Mally sat down on the bench and laughed. It was as good a part as he had ever had.

Early evening. La Signorina leaned over the terrace wall, her hand idly trailing over the soft cool roses. Stretched out on either hand, white and shadowy, lay the great road. She was dreaming. Presently upon the silence came the echo of galloping horses. Two horsemen came cantering toward the Villa Ariadne. She heard their voices.

"Jack, this has been the trip of my life. Verona, Padua, Bologna, and now Florence! This is life. Nothing like it."

"It has been enjoyable, Dan. I only hope our luggage will be at the hotel."

La Signorina's hand closed convulsively over a rose and crumpled it.

"Is that a letter to Pietro?"

The two went clattering down the road.

La Signorina walked slowly back to the villa. It was fatality that this man should again cross her path.

TALENTED MISS HARRIMAN.

Executive Ability of Financial's Daughter, Who Will Wed C. C. Rumsey.

Miss Mary Harriman, who is to marry Charles Cary Rumsey of Buffalo and New York on Thursday, May 26, is the second daughter of the late Edward H. Harriman, the railway magnate, who died on Sept. 9, 1929, and is one of six children who will fall heir to one of the largest fortunes of the world.

Miss Mary Harriman, who was made an executor of the immense estate left by her father, showed that she had inherited a good deal of his business ability, when she on the day following his death she and her mother decided that the girl herself had better take personal charge of the operation of the vast estate at Arden, N. Y. She had always been interested in sports and in the natural life of outdoor excitement and pleasure which the American girl, when she has opportunity to do so, usually loves. But now she showed that she possessed a talent of no mean order for executive work on a large scale. On Oct. 28, 1930, she formally took charge of the Arden farms dairy and assumed the management of the 45,000 acres of the Harriman Orange county farms, and since that time she has actually been running them herself.

Outdoor sports, such as tennis, horse-back riding and automobiling, have always been of the keenest interest to Miss Harriman. Since she has been old enough to go around without a nurse she has spent much of her time and holidays in the great forests of the vast Arden estate.

Charles Cary Rumsey is a son of Laurence D. Rumsey of Buffalo. His family is wealthy and socially prominent and has lived in Buffalo for a long time. Young Mr. Rumsey is a little less than thirty years old and has shown much promise in modeling and sculpture work. He studied for a time at Harvard and later spent several years in Paris at the Beaux Arts. Following his return to the United States he has continued his work and has had a number of groups in exhibitions which have won praise from critics. He is a splendid horseman, an expert polo player and has won many prizes and trophies of his skill at horse shows.

GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN.

Highway Commission Reappointed in Ventura, Cal.

The supervisors in preparation for proposed bond issues in Ventura, Cal., have reappointed as county commissioners Messrs. C. E. Edmonson and F. E. Pfeiffer. This commission was appointed two years ago and went through the question of good roads throughout the county, furnishing specifications and an estimate.

But the financial depression came on when was dropped and the commission discharged. Since then agitation has been started for a new commission and a proposition has been set on foot to bond the county for $100,000 for good roads and a number of bridges. The commission is empowered to again retain Sargent Ward at a salary of not to exceed $400 per month.

The matter of a choice of a court house site in Ventura has been selected by the supervisors. Citizens have raised a purse of $20,000 with which to buy a site, the location being left to the supervisors. Two sites have already been offered.

Half Million For Texas Good Roads.

Seventy-two miles of county roads, distributed throughout the entire county, are to be paved by Harris county, Tex., with shell and gravel within the next twelve months out of a recent road and bridge bond issue of $500,000, according to a schedule adopted by the county commissioners' court. In the list of the roads to be paved are a number of the most important highways in the county, one of which is the Webster Air Line road, running from Harrisburg to the county line, a distance of eighteen miles, where it will connect with a paved road to be constructed by Galveston county thereby giving a complete paved road way from Houston to Galveston via the causeway.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many A Cloverport Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Cloverport. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

J. C. Weatherholt, High St., Cloverport, Ky., says: "Two years ago I did not think it possible that I could ever be well again, in fact, I had settled up my affairs. I cannot fully describe the misery I endured from pains through my back. Whenever I stooped, the pains became so sharp that it really felt as if someone were thrusting a knife into my kidneys. I was often very dizzy, dark spots floated before my eyes and I had to grasp something to keep from falling. My joints became swollen twice their natural size and I lost weight rapidly until I was a mere skeleton. The doctors' medicines and the many guaranteed cures that I tried, did not help me and finally it was my good fortune to hear about Doan's Kidney Pills. I immediately procured a box at Fisher's Drug Store and I was greatly surprised with the results received. Before I had taken the contents of the second box, there was a marked improvement and I continued using them until I was completely cured. I am now well and I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McIlwain Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

CATARRAL DISEASES OF SUMMER TIME.

Most people think that catarrh does not prevail in the summer time. Catarrh is generally regarded as a winter disease.

It certainly is true that catarrh of the throat, bronchitis, tubes and lungs is more prevalent during the winter time. But it is also true that catarrh of the stomach, bowels and kidneys is more prevalent during the summer time.

Thus we have catarrhal diseases of summer, and catarrhal diseases of winter.

It is probably true that the mortality from catarrhal diseases is greater in the winter time than in the summer. But yet there is an alarming number of people who die annually from these catarrhal affections that are peculiar to summer.

Catarrh is a chronic congested inflammation of a mucous membrane. The mucous membrane of the stomach is just as liable to catarrh as the mucous membrane of the throat, the lungs, the bronchitis, etc.

Such is the same kind of a disease as catarrh of the throat and lungs. So, also, is catarrh of the bowels. Catarrh of the kidneys. Catarrh of all the other internal organs.

Catarrhal diseases peculiar to summer are, catarrh of the stomach, sometimes called gastritis; catarrh of the small intestines, sometimes called enteritis; catarrh of the colon, sometimes called colitis. These diseases are very prevalent during the summer, especially if the air be hot and humid.

We regard Perna as an excellent remedy for these forms of internal catarrh. Dr. Hartman's practice, which covered a period of many years, in which he used chiefly Perna for all these diseases, is confirmatory of this fact, from the standpoint of a professional test.

The multitude of letters that we receive from all parts of the United States, in which the effect of Perna is described upon catarrhal affections of the internal organs, would make it appear that this disease is common to all the greatest remedies for this class of diseases, if not indeed the very greatest.

In colic and cramps, attacks of indigestion, inflammation of the bowels by gas, diarrhea, constipation, Perna is relied upon by thousands of people and its use as a household remedy gains a good deal of ground upon the people as time goes on.
